

DAUGHERTY CALLED IN BANK PROBE

FAMILY HOMELESS AS FIRE DESTROYS BUILDING TUESDAY

Combination Filling Station, Home And Grocery Burns

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh M. Marshall and their eight children were made homeless by a fire of undetermined origin which completely destroyed their combination residence, filling station, grocery and left drink establishment, located on the Dayton-Xenia Pike, six miles northwest of Xenia, near Beavercreek High School, at an early hour Tuesday morning.

The building, a two-story frame structure, burned to the ground with its entire contents, entailing a loss estimated at more than $5,000, partly covered by insurance. Smoke, which filled the dwelling before the blaze had gained headway and awakened one of the younger children who was asleep in an upstairs room, probably saved members of the family from being trapped by the flames.

Mr. Marshall, who is ill, not having fully recovered from a recent operation, was asleep downstairs, and Mrs. Marshall and six of the children were sleeping upstairs at the time.

One of the small girls awoke first at 4:20 a. m. when she began to choke from the fumes which were rapidly filling the rooms. She aroused the others and Ruby, 18, the eldest daughter, ran to the window and screamed for help.

Members of the family, clad only in their night clothes, made their way down the stairs and out of the burning residence through the dining room door. A few pieces of clothing grabbed by one of the little girls were all that was saved.

Lack of fire-fighting equipment, except for a small fire extinguisher, made it impossible to check the flames and the family and neighbors could only stand helplessly nearby and watch the building burn down. No other buildings were endangered by the flames.

Cause of the blaze is unknown but it is believed to have originated in the kitchen.

The two eldest boys, Ronald and Delwood, were staying that night at their father's mason patch on the Factory Road, where they slept in a tent.

The other children besides Ronald, Delwood and Ruby are Wendell, Lillian Fern, Hugh, Jr., Wanda and June.

For the present members of the family are staying at neighboring homes, including those of Horace Anderson, Dr. George Anderson and Ralph Smithson. Neighbors have also kindly supplied them with wearing apparel since all of their clothing was consumed in the fire.

The building which burned was comparatively new. The filling station was erected four years ago and the residence addition was built at the rear three years ago.

Accused of poisoning her baby so that she could elope with a clandestine sweetheart, Mrs. Edna Mae Coolbaugh, above, of Coopers-town, N. Y., has confessed to the crime, according to police. In letters seized by police, to the alleged lover, Floyd Ten Broeck, Mrs. Coolbaugh is said to have described how she put poison into the baby's milk for six days before it proved fatal. Theodore Coolbaugh, the woman's husband and father of the child, has been held as a material witness.

EX-CONVICT ADMITS BRUTAL CHILD MURDER

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Sept. 23.—George Sherman Myers, 40-year-old ex-convict, today confessed, according to authorities, to the murder of Marvin Appel, 8, whose body was found near her home August 29 after she had been fatally attacked and strangled with a wire.

Myers was taken to the Indiana State Prison at Michigan City under heavy guard, to forestall possible mob violence, authorities fearing that neighbors of the murdered girl might make good their threats to seize the alleged slayer.

Arrested last Saturday, Myers maintained his innocence until late last night when, according to police, he was trapped in a number of conflicting stories and broke down. He then dictated a confession of the slaying which he signed, police said.

ROGER HORNSBY WILL MANAGE CUBS NEXT YEAR; M'CARTHY OUT

CHICAGO, Sept. 23.—Setting at rest a maze of rumors regarding the 1931 management of the Chicago Cubs, owner William Wrigley, Jr., today confirmed the report that Rogers Hornsby is to replace Joe McCarthy as Cubs manager next year.

Wrigley will give Hornsby a contract for one year or longer, he said. Hornsby's salary in the new job has not yet been ascertained. Wrigley revealed an almost insurmountable desire to produce a world championship team in his Chicago Cubs. It was this desire which prompted him to try the change in management, his statement regarding McCarthy's dismissal showed. The chewing gum magnate didn't think McCarthy was the man to produce a world championship team, he said.

Wrigley said he had planned to present the contract to Hornsby when the season closes next Sunday. The action was to have been delayed in order that McCarthy would be spared the embarrassment during the playing season, but the plans of an impending change became generally known beforehand.

Arrangements with Hornsby, at present a second baseman for the Chicago club, will be made at once, owner Wrigley announced.

Wrigley insisted there is no personal disagreement between him and McCarthy and said the move was made with the intention of winning another National League pennant next season.

"He said he would do everything in his power to procure another managerial berth in the big leagues for McCarthy," Wrigley indicated dissatisfaction with McCarthy began during the world series last year when the Philadelphia Athletics won the world championship.

The final decision was made late last night, as even late yesterday he was admittedly wavering between Hornsby and Charley Grimm as McCarthy's successor.

McCarthy had managed the Bruins for the past five years.

CHANG APPOINTED VIRTUAL DICTATOR OVER NORTH CHINA

SHANGHAI, Sept. 23.—Chang Hsueh-Liang, Mukden warlord who ended the military deadlock between Nationalists and the northern rebel coalition, today was proclaimed "rehabilitation commissioner for north China," making him its virtual dictator.

The appointment was announced by the Nationalist government at Nanking, which Chang's occupation of Peiping, northern capital, and his continual peaceful penetration of rebel territory on the heels of apparently friendly evacuating northern troops, has jubilantly hailed the end of the civil war.

The real purpose of the Manchurian governor in suddenly marching against the northern faction with his 120,000 troops remained unclarified, some observing he saw an opportunity to seize the balance of power for himself while still others declared he reached an understanding with both governments before making a move.

Nanking government officials already have announced plans for a political reorganization as well as formation of a new financial arrangement, to be concluded at a conference with China's leading bankers and economists.

Wrigley said he had planned to present the contract to Hornsby when the season closes next Sunday. The action was to have been delayed in order that McCarthy would be spared the embarrassment during the playing season, but the plans of an impending change became generally known beforehand.

It was expected that the jury would be impaneled by noon today. The jurors will then be taken to Gallon to visit the filling station where Wilcox was shot.

COSTE, BELLONTE OFF FOR SALT LAKE

DENVER, Sept. 23.—Major Dieu-donne Coste and Lieutenant Maurice Bellonte, French transatlantic fliers, hopped off for Salt Lake City today. Their arrival here yesterday was delayed an hour and a half by winds which characterized as being worse than any they encountered while flying over the Atlantic.

The French aviators were greeted on their arrival in Denver by 25,000 admirers, who had been gathered about the airport since the time scheduled for the arrival of the fliers. The public demonstration planned for the transatlantic fliers was cancelled due to the lateness of their arrival.

JEWISH NEW YEAR PARDON GRANTED

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 23.—A Jewish new year's pardon was granted today by Governor Myers Y. Cooper to Charles Shoelky, prisoner in the Ohio penitentiary, from Lucas County.

The pardon was recommended by the state clemency board, and by the trial judge and prosecutor.

Shoelky was received at the state prison January 7, 1919 after being convicted of theft. His sentence would have expired December 11, next. He agreed to leave Ohio, and plans to reside in California.

It was expected that the jury would be impaneled by noon today. The jurors will then be taken to Gallon to visit the filling station where Wilcox was shot.

NOT GUILTY IS GEISKING PLEA

RISING SUN, Ind., Sept. 23.—A plea of not guilty to charges of aiding in the escape of prisoners, automobile banditry, and assault and battery with attempt to kill, today had been entered in court here by Theodore ("Ted") Geisking, alleged Indianapolis gangster.

It was indicated that the request of Geisking's counsel for a change of venue to the Dearborn circuit court, which will be convened at Lawrenceburg, October 6, will be granted.

Geisking, who, for a time was suspected as having had something to do with the assassination of Alfred J. Lingle, Chicago Tribune reporter, is accused of having freed his brother from jail and of having attacked Sheriff Leon Neal with intent to kill.

Geisking's bond was fixed at $21,000.

GALE CLAIMED LIVES OF 46

GERMAN ESPIONAGE SECRETS REVEALED AT CLAIMS HEARING

Imperial System Is Explained At Probe At The Hague

THE HAGUE, Sept. 23.—The austere secrets of a vast espionage machine as operated in various countries by the former German imperial government were gradually exposed today as hearings before the German-American mixed claims commission for $10,000,000 damages in the "black Tom" and Kingsland, N. J. Sabotage cases continued.

Robert W. Bonyne, the American agent, represented a graphic account of the concealed operations as carried on by German secret agents here and in England. He laid responsibility for the sinking of the British warship Hampshire, which carried Great Britain's famous commander Lord Kitchener to his death, squarely on the shoulders of espionage operations.

The Hampshire was sunk west of the Orkney Islands, June 5, 1916, while enroute to Russia. Kitchener and his entire staff were drowned.

Bonyne offered a statement made to him by a German secret agent admitting that while stationed in England he sent a code to the German intelligence staff telling of Lord Kitchener's departure on a military mission to Russia.

In the opening sessions of the hearing Bonyne endeavored to prove that both the Black Tom and Kingsland disasters were the work of incendiaries in the pay of Germany. Recalling that Kingsland was the chief depot for munitions destined for Russia, he charged a man named Wozniak, an employee there in January, 1917, with causing the blast by dropping an explosive pencil into some machinery. He added that hundreds of these explosive tubes were shipped from Berlin and smuggled into the country to be used for the destruction of American factories.

Germany's "making war on the United States" during the latter's period of neutrality preceding entry into the war included infecting thousands of horses with anthrax germs and similar outrages, the American declared.

Use Of Breaches Buoy Effects Gallant Rescue

PETERHEAD, Scotland, Sept. 23.—Gallant rescue work by means of a breaches buoy today saved the lives of the eighty members of the crew of the British steamer "City of Osaka," which went aground on the rocky Scottish coast while en route for New York.

The ship is expected to pound to pieces on the rocks.

The breaches buoy was catapulted to the vessel's deck by a lifeboat which put out to her assistance on receipt of an S. O. S.

The "City of Osaka" was bound for New York when she was driven ashore. There were no passengers aboard.

PLYMOUTH, Eng., Sept. 23.—The crew of the Antwerp steamer Ida, consisting of twelve men, was brought to safety by means of a breaches buoy today when the vessel went on the rocks off Prawle Point.

REVOLT CONTINUES TO SMOLDER; THREE NATIONS INVOLVED

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 23.—The torch of revolt smoldered and flamed spasmodically along the west coast of South America today, and unrest seethed in at least one spot on its eastern seaboard.

Chile, Ecuador and Uruguay rumbled with discordant sounds, placing the stability of the respective governments under suspicion. Effective censorship cloaked the real situation in a veil of uncertainty, however.

Military movements, subversive in character, were believed afoot in Ecuador as the culmination of existing dissatisfaction among the troops due to application of the governmental economy as to army appropriations.

At Montevideo, capital of Uruguay, business leaders executed a sharp protest against further old age retirement and pension taxes by halting business for two days and publicly charging the government with an existing pension fund deficit of $250,000,000.

The Chilean government, as well as its legislature, issued lengthy statements defining the character of a brief revolt in the south of Chile that was held a complete failure, but other reports tended to contradict the official communiqués. The situation in Chile by expert observers today was viewed as "extremely grave," with the possibility of an outbreak in Santiago City held probable.

WHEELING, W. Va., Sept. 23.—J. William Schultze, 58, a widely known figure in bootleg activities in and around this section, is dead here today as the result of a shock which he received a few weeks ago when a group of dry officers raided his home in an exclusive residential section here and confiscated an elaborate distillery. He had been critically ill since that time.

Schultze jumped into local notoriety a few years ago when he became involved in an alcohol-shipping conspiracy. He served a term in the Atlanta prison for his part in the plot.

DOWN GOES BREAD
NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—Low levels in wheat prices today brought lower bread prices. Some stores announced a reduction in the price of 20-ounce loaves from eight to seven cents.

DIETS BLAMED FOR FARM ILLS

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 23.—Eat more, fast less, and bring the farmer happiness.

The eighteen-day diet fad, said Dr. William Morgan, president of the American Medical Association, thinned the farmer's pocket book several million dollars worth. He spoke at the annual meeting of the American Bakers' Association.

Henry Stude, Chicago, president of the bakers, opened the convention with the remark, "Fifty per cent of the people are on a self-imposed diet from a self-diagnosed ailment, 90 per cent of which is that tired feeling produced by a lack of sufficient food."

"We used to tell how good and nutritious food was. Now we count the calories and value the vitamins. A return to normalcy in eating would hasten a return to normalcy for the farmer."

DEMOCRATS IN NEW HAMPSHIRE ARE WET

CONCORD, N. H., Sept. 23.—An informal poll of the delegates gathered here today for the state Democratic convention revealed that New Hampshire Democrats will adopt a "wet" plank in the platform for the first time since the inception of the eighteenth amendment.

Though militant "drys" were expected to fight the measure, it was understood that a majority of the platform committee saw victory for the "wet" faction.

AVIATOR FINED

LONDON, Sept. 23.—For "failing to produce his pilot's license on the demand of a police officer," Leo George Kerchner, London civilian aviator, was fined six dollars in the police court at Southwark-on-Sea. Kerchner made a forced landing in a meadow owing to engine trouble. When asked by a local cop for his license, he was unable to produce it.

Under English law, a pilot in charge of a machine must have his license on his person when

FASCIST SCHEME TO OVERCOME GERMANY EXPOSED BY "REDS"

BERLIN, Sept. 23.—A sensational expose of an alleged plot for the "peaceful penetration" of Germany by Fascism in place of any spectacular putsch was made today by the "Red Flag," Communist organ.

In support of its startling claims, the newspaper published an alleged secret memorandum detailing in graphic manner the post-election plans of Adolf Hitler and his associates. In it he is pictured as advising his Fascist leaders and "storm troops" to abandon all intentions for any sudden putsch, counseling them instead to concentrate all efforts on peaceful infiltration into public favor and a gradual assumption of the government.

Dictating to his party an extensive subversive campaign for the eventual political conquest of the fatherland, according to the Communist organ, Hitler outlined a definite course to be followed unswervingly from start to finish.

First, according to the alleged memorandum, Fascist followers were instructed to infuse the entire state and all municipal administration machinery with their creed and policies. In that manner, it was pointed out, the eventual assumption of the government machinery would be a mere formality.

Second, increased propaganda among the army and police as well as other protective forces was urged. The self-explanatory slogan, "revolution is made with the army—no against it," was offered for guidance.

Third, the immediate expansion of the Fascist paid "storm troop" battalions was held necessary.

Fourth, Hitler was quoted as doubly anxious for the immediate "impartial" mass organizations of labor unions and the formation of co-operatives.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 23.—Work preliminary to the construction of the new $5,000,000 state office building here will begin immediately, it was announced today. Buildings on the site of the proposed structure will be torn down at once.

The state office building commission late Monday awarded the following contracts preparatory to the erection of the state office building: general contract, providing for a Georgia marble building, to the Struck Construction Company, of Cincinnati and Louisville, for $2,622,000; electrical work to the Paul L. Gilmore Company, Columbus, $179,000; plumbing and fire protection, the Samuel A. Eswein Company, Columbus, $95,130; ventilating, R. P. Leiby, Columbus, $44,500; heating, P. H. Meyer Company, Louisville, $99,250; drinking and water cooling system C. P. Wood, Columbus, $4,560.

Desiring additional information relative to claims of patent infringement involving certain elevators, the commission rejected all bids on elevators and decided to advertise for new bids.

Present plans call for completion of the state office building by December 31, 1931. Architect Harry F. Hake, Cincinnati, announced. The contractor may be penalized $250 for each additional day required to complete the work.

SAY NEGOTIATIONS HAVE BEEN DROPPED

GENEVA, Sept. 23.—Reports of an absolute breakdown in disarmament negotiations between France and Italy were circulated in the League of Nations corridors during the lunch hour today, following unsuccessful conferences which lasted all morning.

The breakdown was believed due to Italy's unflinching demand for naval parity with France. An official communique outlining the situation was expected later in the day.

Witnesses who testified before the grand jury Monday included P. J. Burk, chairman of a committee of depositors, and Elmer Junk, farmer and former county commissioner, who said he gave a $7,500 note to the Ohio State Bank without obtaining money from the bank.

JEALOUSY ENDS ROBBERY GANG

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 23.—Jealous over the attentions which were paid his wife by two other admirers, Lester Skiver, today helped to bring about the arrest of his wife, Mrs. Adela Skiver, 21, the mother of three small children, and Marion Greer, 24. The two alleged lovers, police said, are suspected of having been implicated in the robbery of a Rome filling station of $20 early Tuesday.

Detectives were called to the Skiver home this morning to investigate a report that someone had attempted to shoot Mrs. Skiver. She explained to them that she had been out riding with two men, that her husband met them in front of the Skiver home in a jealous rage, and that one of her men friends took a shot at her husband and missed.

Upon the advice of Skiver, his wife was arrested and questioned. She admitted that she and two men had held up the station at Rome but that they had secured only $9. Greer, who was taken into custody had nothing to do with the robbery, it was explained. He is the brother of one of the suspects. The names of the other men were not revealed.

Scion of Leading Theatrical Family Is to Follow in Forebears' Footsteps

Ethel Barrymore Colt Prepares to Carry on Family Tradition of Drews and Barrymores to the Ninth Generation.

LIONEL BARRYMORE

ETHEL BARRYMORE AND DAUGHTER

JOHN BARRYMORE

JOHN DREW

MAURICE BARRYMORE

By ALICE ALDEN
NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—Will the rich mantle of the Barrymore and the Drews drape its graceful folds around the slim young shoulders of Ethel Barrymore Colt?

TRUE TO TRADITIONS
The 18-year-old daughter of Ethel Barrymore, true to family traditions, has elected to make her debut not in a flower-decked ballroom but in the theater, as a member of the cast surrounding her famous mother in a dramatization, by Daniel Reed, of Julia Peterkin's prize-winning novel, "Scarlet Sister Mary." And true to theatrical tradition that decrees that an artist should sacrifice personal charm and beauty to whatever facial and physical characteristics may be demanded by the script, both Ethels are going to play in blackface. Miss Barrymore will play the title role of the Carolinian negress in her vivid Odyssey from youth and a primitive joy in life to old age and a true spiritual understanding. Ethel the younger will take the important part of the mulatto child. This will mark the first occasion on which any member of America's famous royal family of the theater has ever appeared in black-face make-up.

SHADES OF GLORIOUS PAST
One does not need to be spiritually inclined to imagine that an unseen audience will people the auditorium, or rather the stage, of the theater in Cleveland on Aug. 29, when young Ethel makes her debut. Ethel Barrymore's mother, the brilliant, charming and graceful "Georgie" Drew, Georgie's parents, the famous John and Louisa Lane Drew, her father, the debonair and delightful Maurice Barrymore, and her late grand-uncle, the never-to-be forgotten John Drew, that grand, but ever young, old man of the American stage. If disembodied spirits have the power to materialize, then surely these ghostly members of the Barrymore and Drew families will be on hand to see if their descendant is to keep burning the torch of the drama that has been held aloft by such worthy hands for so many generations.

CHOOSE OWN CAREER

youngful daughter full power to choose her career and to indicate whether she wished to take her place in fashionable society or to face the rigors and arduous demands of the theatrical profession. Young Ethel completed her education at the convent at which both her grandmother and mother had been students and then went abroad to a fashionable finishing school in Italy. It was on her return to New York this summer that Ethel Barrymore's daughter made the momentous decision that has been of tremendous interest to theatergoers throughout the world. Both Ethel and her brother, John, have appeared abroad with much success, the latter winning praise from the most exacting of English critics for his wonderful "Hamlet."

FROM CONVENT TO STAGE
When Ethel Barrymore made her debut she was but a girl, not yet fifteen years of age. Family finances were instrumental in transposing a quiet child from the peaceful convent to the hurly-burly of theatrical life. Her first part was in "The Rivals" with her grandmother and uncle, John Drew. Her first important role came when she was all of fifteen. This was a part in "The Bangle Shop" with John Drew. Later she played with William Gillette and with Sir Henry Irving in England. She married proximately throughout the different seasons of the year in the slides I shall show you this morning," he said.

A collection of slides of unusual interest was then displayed, each illustrated by personal reminiscences and anecdotes. Cedar Swamp, near Springfield, was the scene of several pictures including "monkey-faced" owls, skunk cabbages—"one of the best stands in Ohio is in Cedar Swamp," Mr. Franks remarked—and ladyslippers, which are also growing in great abundance there, although they are in places hard to reach.

"A little north of Cedar Swamp," the speaker continued, "the woods and small streams provide an ideal home and feeding ground for herons." He then showed slides illustrating the nesting and feeding habits of black-crowned herons, of great blue herons, and of yellow-brown herons. The latter, he told the audience, were never seen in Ohio up to 1928, and the photographs he showed were the first ever made of these birds in this state.

Scenes of woods near Columbus, of Buckeye Lake, and of Clifton (Ohio), together with close-ups of wild flower, bird, and animal life, followed. One of the unique pictures was that of the eggs of a night hawk on a gravel roof of a business building in Columbus. "Here," the speaker observed, "the night hawk is removed from its natural enemies, and will benefit by civilization, whereas such birds as the whippoorwill will probably be exterminated by civilization."

UNIQUE in their style are the calendars issued to members of the Junior Women's Club this year. The club will turn to China for its study this year and will use as its subject "Lanterns of Cathay." BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

FOLLOW THE LEADER—Whoever will be great among you, let him be your servant; And whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your minister; Even as the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many.—Matthew 20: 26, 27, 28.

THE ROAD HOG

The president of the New York Automobile club says that "what we need most in this motor age is a return to the good old-fashioned road courtesy that existed in the days of the horse and buggy."

Across a single memory flash three pictures of that good old-fashioned "courtesy." One of them is of a surly farmer in upstate New York, who "won't eat any city man's dust;" and who, to make good his boast, compels a city doctor, visiting a patient, to keep behind his lumbering wagon. The second picture is of a young sport in a small town in Maine, washing up his buggy in order to take his best girl for a ride on Sunday, who will try to pass every other buggy on the road—and who has let it be known all over town that he "will take the hub off" anyone who tries to pass him. The third is of a Chinese mafio, arrested for reckless driving on the maloo at Shanghai, excusing his action on the ground that he had to do it to advertise his animal; that horses that "wouldn't run away" were drugs on the market patronized by wealthy young Chinese bucks! These pictures, as anyone whose memory runs back to the turn of the century knows, are typical of the horse and buggy era.

The roadhog of today is the spawn of the roadhog of yesterday. The advent of the automobile had no fundamental effect on road manners. All it did was to multiply the number of roadhogs by multiplying the number of human beings using the roads. What is needed is not a return to the manners of the horse-and-buggy age, which were no better than those of today; but to move forward to a new etiquette, which will be based on the realization that as the world fills up with people and the roads with fast-moving vehicles, comfort and safety of travel can be obtained only by increased willingness to share cheerfully the right of way with others.

"RECOGNITION DAY"

Simultaneous recognition by Washington of the new governments in Argentina, Bolivia and Peru was a piece of sane and sensible statesmanship. It obliterated the chance to charge the American government with playing favorites, which a tandem process might have left open, in view of the fact that the defunct regime in Peru was extremely friendly to this country, and the one which had been superseded in Argentina was cold toward us and has given way to a government that already has indicated a desire to establish better understanding and relationships.

By acting as it has, Washington emphasizes the position that the one real test before recognition, where a new government behaves in accordance with the general international usages of civilized countries, is a demonstration that it is firmly enough established to maintain a stable government, and is in reasonable control of the country it is attempting to run.

That attitude is doubly important because it disposes of the untenable and troublesome Wilson doctrine that a regime born in this hemisphere, by a revolutionary upset of its predecessor, is by no means to be given recognition in the capital of the United States.

Neither the Harding nor Coolidge administration evinced any great enthusiasm for that idea, but it has remained for Mr. Hoover to "forget" it, as though it had never existed, except that presumably it will still possess some force with respect to Central American governments, which have a special agreement among themselves regarding non-recognition of successful revolutionary regimes.

Now an explorer has departed for Honduras to find "the cradle of man." Has it never occurred to any of the seekers after that relic that maybe somebody smashed it up and used it for kindling wood a long time ago?

As if returning to work were not hard enough under the most favorable circumstances, we now have to endure the propaganda boosting September and October as the finest vacation months of the year.

If it is true, as London Punch suggests, that the English gave America the saxophone, maybe that is the reason they are so decent with us in most things. Maybe they don't want to stir us up any more than we are stirred up.

The WAY of the WORLD

NO WAGE CUT

Employers of labor have learned that there can be no widely distributed prosperity unless wages are fairly high. A cut in wages means a cut in buying power. And a cut in buying power means stagnation and depression.

RAISE THE LEVEL

Balfour, English industrialist, speaking at Sheffield, says there are 900,000,000 people in the world who are not doing their share in the consumption of agricultural products and who are living at a standard of life that is unreasonable for this age. That's important. Much of the unhappiness, unrest, depression in the world comes from living at too low a standard. At first thought one says people live at a low standard because they have to, because their incomes are small. That is not always the case. Thousands could live at a higher level if they had more pride, more self-respect, and if they were less ignorant.

THE NEED TO SPEND

Much of the cause of the bad times we have had in business, and which now, happily, appear to be changing, comes because people who have money saved up continue to hoard it instead of spending it to gratify reasonable wants. They have a right to have more of the good things of life. They have a right to live on a higher plane. They are too timid. They have too little faith in the country and too little faith in themselves.

EATING ON $3.43

Statement by the American Research Foundation says a man can eat "well" on $3.43 a week. Perhaps he can, though this writer doubts it. The fact remains that any man who eats on $3.43 a week, unless he is temporarily forced to, is a gastronomical miser of the worst sort.

TRAVELING

In 1840 a record-breaking trip was made from Chicago to New York. The time was six days. Today one goes from New York to Chicago by train in 20 hours or by airplane over night. A Chicago newspaper clipping of 1840 reads like this:

"Rapid Traveling—We understand that one of our Merchants, recently reached New York, from this city in six days. He took the Steamboat to Buffalo—then Railroad and Steam to Lewiston and Syracuse, then railroad to Albany, and steam to New York, without any delay. This is indeed rapid traveling—and is a remarkable commentary on the past, and on the still greater improvements of the future. Six days from Chicago to New York! only think of it!"

Damon and Pythias
Please tell me something about the friendship of Damon and Pythias.

Damon and Pythias were two friends of Syracuse. When Pythias, condemned to death, begged to be allowed to return home to arrange his affairs, Damon pledged his own life for his friend's. Pythias returned just in time to save Damon's life and the elder Dionysius, tyrant of Syracuse, was so struck by the noble example that he pardoned Pythias and asked to be admitted to the friendship of the two men.

Baseball, Flyers and Ships
Does a pitcher in the National or American league have to pitch four and one-half innings before he is credited with a win or loss? Can a pilot tell when he is upside down when flying in fog, without looking at his instruments? Does a ship sink to the bottom of the ocean when it goes down? What do the bodies do? Does either of them reach the ground under the ocean?

Yes, four and one-half innings are required. A pilot can tell he is flying upside down by the pressure on his safety belt and other physical symptoms, such as blood rushing to his head. An ocean boat will sink to the bottom, where it disintegrates, under a tremendous water pressure. If the water is deep enough, unless it has a wooden upper structure sufficient to cause it to float or carries a cargo, such as timber, which will keep it afloat by its buoyancy for a time. Bodies rise after a period of days and float with the current. Divers often examine vessels on the ocean's floor if the water is not too deep. Bodies go to the bottom if trapped in a vessel or weighted down.

Bo-Broadway

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

NEW YORK—Pop Voeuburg, for forty years official handicapper at the local Jockey Club, veteran of 35,000 races and who has fixed the weights of a quarter of a million horses, never backs his judgment with his bank roll at the track.

"A thousand things can happen to a horse from paddock to post and from post to finish," says Pop. "And you can't win, bettin' on the ponies. That is, you can't make money at it."

LIT'RY NOTE

Old Doc Axel Munthe, famous neurologist, wrote a book called "The Story of San Michele." Now, more than a year after publication, Dutton, who is responsible for the book in America, reports that it's been selling more copies each week than any other book of non-fiction, or fiction, which they have published in the last three years.

The publisher didn't think much of it at first. He was going on the word of a couple of professional "readers" who shrugged and said: "Oh, it's all right—pretty good book; but the public'll never like it."

It's leading the non-fiction list all over the country today. Which proves that a good book can get by without a ballyhoo; that the Proletariat is wrong nine times out of ten; and that when it comes to the matter of good taste, common sense and judgment, old Average Reader is no slouch.

GETTING OLD

One of the big, puffy and dotted New York morning dailies gravely commented editorially the other day on the fact that when comedy begins to put on style, it rarely seems funny. Their idea was that the best gag in the world will fall flat in an atmosphere of vanished grandeur.

And they ended their editorial thus: "Probably the truth is that money is a serious thing, and must be treated as such. You cannot get saucy in its presence any more than you can get saucy in the presence of the President of the United States." The funny part of it is that the founder of the newspaper in question, had no reverence whatever for riches—in fact, cut down the inheritance of one of his older sons because the lad married into the Social Register.

ALMOST RIPE!

OLD FASHIONED G. O. P. REGULARS SHOW SYMPATHY FOR INSURGENTS AS SENATE CAMPAIGNS PROGRESS

WASHINGTON.—Old-fashioned, hardboiled Republican regulars are showing a curious sympathy with Republicanism of the progressive, insurgent type as this year's campaign progresses.

The supposition a few weeks ago was that the regulars would do their best to beat the insurgents for re-nomination wherever they could, in favor of regulars like themselves. It was surmised that, in the event of certain ultra-radical re-nominations, the standpaters would almost hope for the victory of conservative Democrats next November.

Actual developments have not borne out these anticipations at all.

Of course it is possible that the regulars' unexpectedly conciliatory attitude toward insurgency is a manifestation of the get-together spirit which generally animates the Republicans as election day draws near, no matter how badly they may have been split a little while previously or how sure it may be that they will be just as badly split again a little later on.

Yet there are signs that something other or has conveyed a hint to regularity of the existence of a genuine grievance in insurgent territory, and that, with better understanding, the standpaters rather belatedly have decided it was possible they were standing a trifle too pat.

A still funnier thing!—The Republican regulars who show the most pronounced evidences of such a change of heart are the hardest boiled of the hard boiled, like Senator Moses and Senator Fess; it is by no means so noticeable among the White House's strongest supporters, who hitherto have been regarded as comparatively liberal (not progressives but not ultra-conservatives either), like Senators Vandenberg and Allen.

As for President Hoover, he shows no progressive yielding whatever. And Mr. Hoover, in 1928, was regarded as himself moderately progressive. That was why the G. O. P. old guardsmen fought his nomination. On the other hand, most of the progressives (not all, but a majority) favored him.

Today, Senator Moses, who referred to members of the progressive group as "sons of the wild jackass," is plugging industriously for the re-election of Senators Norris, McMaster, Schall and Pine.

The White House has denied Senator Schall a voice in the filling of appointive federal offices in his own state of Minnesota—if that means that the administration does not like Schall's kind of Republicanism. And when Chairman Fess of the G. O. P. national committee issued a statement in support of Senator Norris, upon the latter's renomination, the White House followed it up with a statement discounting Senator Fess' statement.

It is not so extraordinary in a practical statesman like Senator Moses to work hard for a candidate who wears his party label, even though such candidate's views may diverge mightily widely from the New Hampshire senator's. That often happens, as a matter of party regularity.

It begins to be exceedingly extraordinary, however, when a standpater so deeply dyed as Senator Moses always has been can see his way clear to boost for a candidate who, seemingly, is too malignant an insurgent to be swallowed by as progressive an individual as Mr. Hoover formerly was supposed to be.

Does it mean that Republicans like Senators Moses and Fess have been growing more liberal? Or that President Hoover, and Republicans who concur in his opinion of Senators McMaster, Schall, Pine and Norris, have been growing more conservative?

Not that it answers the above questions, but just as a suggestion—Some time ago I had occasion to talk with Senator Daniel O. Hastings of Delaware, who freely admits that he is one of the most conservative persons in either house of congress and from one of the most conservative states in the country.

"But," he said, "I do not share the view of some folk that our so-called radicals from the west are wild-eyed bolsheviks. 'It seems to me that they must represent an honest sentiment in their section, and since it exists, I am prepared to believe that legitimate reasons exist for it, which we eastern lawmakers don't understand, simply because we don't know that territory.'"

"If so, we make a great mistake to fight all the west's demands without investigation. For the good of the east and west alike, we are bound to study the western problem, fully as much as we are entitled to ask the west to consider ours, and if we can't arrive at the same answer for both areas, at least we can effect a compromise."

At the moment, I took this to be a purely personal expression

Peter's Adventures

By Mrs. Florence Smith Vincent

BUSY-BODY SPOILS A SURPRISE

IF A BOMB HAD fallen at their feet, the Andy could not have been more surprised. They stared at Peter until the boy wondered if their eyes wouldn't pop out of their head.

"What? You take of our eggs? Are you a nurse as we are?" They demanded of the stranger.

"No nurse, just a friend," laughed Peter.

"Would you like to visit our cow pasture?" The nurse who had made fun of Peter made up her mind she had been too hasty and tried her best to make up for her rudeness.

"Would I!" Curiosity was one of Peter's strong points. "Lead on, I'll follow!"

"Oh n-n-n you'll not!" The words came out in a choking gasp, and Peter turned to find Busy stuttering with rage at his elbow.

"You j-j-j mind your own business, Nurse, stammered Peter's pal. If you had a grain of sense you'd know that the boy is here in Antown as my guest, and it is my right to show him around. All this morning I've been planning to take him to the cow pasture, and now you have gone and spoiled my surprise. You are a busybody, that's what you are. How would you like it if you had brought a friend to pay a call on me, and I should—first laugh in his face—and then right-about-turn and invite the visitor to go off sight-seeing with me!"

"You wouldn't be so mean!" Nurse looked astonished. Busy tossed her head.

"Oh, wouldn't I, after the mean trick you tried to play on me!"

Next: "As Others See Us."

from the exceptionally enlightened Senator Hastings.

Since then, observing the astonishing procedure of such standpaters as Senators Moses and Fess, I have wondered whether the Delaware solon has not actually made converts or if his ideas may not be catching.

It creates a peculiar situation between the G. O. P. old guard and the White House, anyway.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

MENU HINT

Baked Ham Scalloped Potatoes
Buttered Carrots Pineapple Salad
Cake Sauté Nuts

Tea or Coffee
I am including three cake recipes in today's recipes. There is an occasion when every member of the family feels that no dessert will satisfy them quite so much as a good home made cake. Cakes do not take so much time to make, if the housewife trains herself to think so, and like a certain brand of cigarettes, "they satisfy."

Today's Recipes

Gold Cake—One-half cup butter, one-half cup sugar, five egg yolks plus one whole egg, one-half cup sugar, one teaspoon orange flavoring, one and three-fourths cups cake flour, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one-half cup milk. Cream butter until soft, and add gradually the first half cup of sugar. Beat eggs till light and fluffy and add the other half cup of sugar to them. Combine the mixtures and add flavoring. Mix and sift the dry ingredients together and add alternately with the milk. Bake in layers in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, for about 25 minutes. This recipe will make two 10-inch layers, or three eight-inch layers.

Cooking the White Squash

There is in the squash family the cympling squash, also known as "patty pan," "scallop" or "white (or yellow) bush" and by the crook neck. Later, of course, we have the small acorn or Hubbard varieties. The cympling is one of the tastiest of late summer and early fall vegetables, yet there are many who do not know just how it is cooked. In selecting this variety of squash, watch for those which are tender enough for a sharp edge to pierce the skin easily. The average size weighs about two pounds, and you will be interested to know, makes about two cups when cooked and mashed.

You see, the cympling is a very large per cent water, and has little food value, except for the mineral salts and vitamins found in the vegetables of this class. Because of the high water content, we cook the cympling in a very small amount of water, just enough, in fact to start the cooking without burning. If the squash is very tender, wash it well and cook it without peeling. In this case, slice it, discarding the seeds, of course, and add just enough boiling salted water to start the cooking. Now cook it until tender and the larger part of the water is evaporated. Season well, and serve with a generous amount of melted butter. Besides serving it with melted butter, put it in a baking dish, and sprinkle the top generously with grated cheese and bread crumbs, and set it in the oven just long enough to brown the top.

Activities Of Baby Use Extra Food

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

The infant requires extra food for the higher rate at which it carries on its life processes, and also extra food for its rapid increase in growth, and some allowance must be made as a margin of safety for undigested food.

The measurement of the full value of food is the calorie. Never mind what a calorie is at the moment. It is a unit of measurement. Just as an inch is a unit of measurement. If somebody said to you, "My car will make 12 miles to the gallon of gas," that is like saying, "An adult will use 20 calories per pound of his body weight in 24 hours."

An infant uses more than this. Just at rest it uses 25 calories per pound. Its comparatively slight activities add 10 calories per pound. Its growth needs add seven more, and we must allow six for undigested parts of the food.

In tabular form, as given by Dr. Marriot, their requirements are as follows:

| | Calories Per Pound |
|---------------------------------------|--------------------|
| Basic resting nutrition | 25 |
| Allowance for specific dynamic action | 10 |
| Allowance for growth | 25 |
| Allowance for undigested food | 10 |
| Totals | 115 |

Most of this caloric need is furnished in the infant's dietary by sugar and fat. Mother's milk contains sugar in the amount of 10 per cent for the human infant. Cow's milk also contains sugar. Its fat content is known by the amount of cream. Artificial infant food contains, as you know, a great deal of sugar.

Besides the increased amount of total calories, the baby must have more protein than the adult per pound of body weight. Protein is what the body is made of, and the baby's body is growing very rapidly, so it requires an extra amount of this building material. An adult certainly requires at least 100 grammes of protein a day. This is the equivalent of 3 1-2 ounces. Most adults take and in my opinion need, not more than that.

A baby, on the contrary, requiring for difference in weight, requires about twice that much. (It figures this is 3 to 4 grammes per kilogram of body weight, or 0.05 to 0.06 ounces per pound.) For the sake of comparison, if a baby were raised to the weight of an adult it would need 7 1-2 ounces of protein instead of the 3 1-2 the adult needs.

Protein is found in meat, milk eggs and many vegetables. Mother's milk contains protein perfectly adapted to the human infant. It requires 1 1-2 ounces of cow's milk per pound of the baby's weight per day to give it all its protein requirements.

Father To Seek Companionship

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

You sometimes hear of a person who is unmarried because he met and loved in youth and the loved one died.

You occasionally meet a man or woman who was happily married and whose mate died, remaining true to said mate for the remainder of his life. Generally speaking, the more happily mated a person is, the more he misses his mate when death takes her, and the more likely he is to re-ved.

I remember reading of the crushing grief of a man whose wife had made life miserable for him and who bewailed on one occasion that undoubtedly when she "was gone" her husband would immediately marry again. His answer was: "It is usually those who are happily married who mate soon again. One such experience is enough for me, my wife, which silenced even her acid tongue."

No one but those who have experienced it know the dreadful loneliness of a near and dear one snatched away by death. The terrible longing for "the touch of the vanished hand, the sound of a voice that is still."

Sons and daughters think it terrible if mother or father shows any interest in another person of the opposite sex after they have been so bereft, but children don't understand that dear as they may be, they cannot begin to take the place of the one who has gone.

I know it is hard to think of a stranger in mother or father's place, but children have their own lives to live and it is impossible for them to be companions in the same sense that their dead parent was. The only attitude to take, then, when said parent begins to find consolation in some outsider, is the unselfish one that if such companionship of their own age, and even another marriage is going to make them happier they should be encouraged to have it.

Yes, I know all about the many problems that such second marriages bring, and I sympathize deeply with the children who have to see some one else in mother's or father's place, but just the same, children should try to put such feelings aside, and welcome such a person to the family circle.

"Dear Virginia Lee: I am a widower of several months and a young widow several years younger than myself seems to be interested in me. I could spend some time with her instead of staying at home alone, but for my children, who are all grown, they think I am losing respect for their mother in doing so, although they know I dearly loved her when she was with me and was never away from home when not necessary."

"They go when they please and where they please, but seem to think I should be contented at home alone. Now, Virginia, would I be doing wrong to see this lady once in a while, or should I stay at home and grieve over the one I can have no more?"

WITH A BROKEN HOME
It is not easy for your children to think of a stranger taking their mother's place in your life. You can understand how they feel about that and sympathize with them, but you have your own life to live, as they cannot be the companions some one nearer your own age would be. Of course I am not assuming that you are contemplating marriage with this lady, but you are not an old man. I imagine from your letter, and as your children will leave home eventually and leave you, it is only right that you should at some future time plan to patch up your broken home. And no possible disrespect will be shown to your dear wife by spending part of your time with a congenial companion.

DIMPLES: "I strongly suspect that your fiancé knows very well that he is treating you shabbily when he breaks dates with you or says he is going to bed early and then goes on other dates. A guilty conscience is the thing that makes him cross when you say something to him about it."

I suppose it would break your heart and everything to break your engagement, but I surely think that a fellow who would deceive his girl friend as I am is deceiving you, would make an unsatisfactory husband. Don't you, in your heart, think so?"

R. R.: Get yourself another boyfriend. R. R. I am afraid the one who gets "rather mushy" has grown indifferent.

Be Artistic In Using Eye Make-Up

By GLADYS GLAD

YESTERDAY I attempted to demonstrate to you the necessity of skill in the employment of eye cosmetics. Today I wish to discuss with you some further aspects of eye make-up.

If you use an eyeshadow cream, it is necessary that you choose a shade that will enhance the natural coloring of your irises. Eyeshadow creams generally come in three standard shades—brown, blue and gray. The brown shade should be used by those of you who possess brown eyes. The blue shade should be employed by blue-eyed individuals. The gray shade may be used advantageously for any other color of eyes. The bizarre shades, such as green, bronze, etc., should be avoided, as their effect is apt to be most unnatural.

Artistry must also be employed in making up the eyelashes. Select a mascara that does not stiffen the eyelashes. If your lashes are coated with a substance that makes them stiff and brittle, they will break off easily.

It is wise to apply a bit of vaseline to your lashes before administering the mascara. It will form a smoother surface for the application of this cosmetic. Then apply the mascara, brushing it slowly and carefully from the lids to the tips of the lashes. Use only a very small amount on the lower lashes.

Next, using the tips of your finger, remove any excess of the mascara, at the same time curling your upper lashes upward, and your lower lashes downward. Take a corner of a soft cloth over the tip of your finger, and gently wipe off any trace of the mascara from your eyelids.

The shade of your mascara should harmonize with the shade of eye-shadow cream you use. Those of you who use the brown eyeshadow should use the brown mascara. The users of the blue or gray eyeshadow should use the black mascara. And, as in the choice of eyeshadow shades, the exotic, unnatural hues should be avoided.

CRACK WASHINGTON ELEVEN TO FURNISH OPPOSITION THERE

Blue Lions Provide Stiff
Test For Untried
Bucs

By PHIL FRAME

Renewing a rivalry on the gridiron which began at least a score of years ago and has continued with only three intermissions since 1911, Xenia Central High's 1930 model football machine will make its initial run of the season Friday afternoon, clashing with Washington C. H. at the Alumni Field in Washington.

This contest will be no mere trial spin for the Buccaneer machine because the Blue Lions have virtually the same aggregation which last season trampled the Blue and White grididders, 21 to 0 in the season's inaugural tilt.

Three weeks of preparation have indicated that Xenia will have a better team than last season but Coach Wilson is anxious to see what his boys can accomplish under actual fire.

Missing from the squad will be Joe Smittle, Kenneth Finlay, Pulliam, Patton, Donovan, Billmyer, Hardy and others, but six letter men are back and a set of dependable and men as well as a guard is probably the crying need of the new machine which "Pinky" has sought to rebuild, although another good backfield man would be more than welcome.

The need for flankmen is so urgent that Lester Price, a center last year, will probably be changed to end. The ability of other new men to come through would prove the salvation of the Buccaneers. Washington C. H. has already encountered and hurled its first gridiron obstacle this season, having beaten Circleville, 37 to 0, last Friday. The Blue Lions have a great backfield combination in Armbruster, Noon and Cockerell, in addition to a heavy and experienced line.

It is perhaps unfortunate that Xenia was not scheduled to play a "warm-up" game before meeting a foe like Washington but it goes without saying that the Bucs will furnish spirited opposition.

Since 1911, Xenia and Washington have met twenty times in football and the Blue Lions, with ten victories over this period, have an edge of one game. Xenia teams have won nine games and one contest resulted in a scoreless tie. Washington teams have rolled up a total of 207 points against 179 points for Xenia eleven.

The two schools have met annually in football with the exception of three years—1913, 1920 and 1923. Here is a list of the Xenia-Washington football scores since 1911:

ARRANGE SKEDS FOR FOTBALL IN 1931

Football schedules for the six Miami Valley League schools for 1931 are expected to be arranged at the semi-annual meeting of representatives of the league schools to be held at the Y. M. C. A. in Dayton Tuesday night.

Coach Walter C. Wilson, Assistant Coach Glen H. Patterson, F. R. Woodruff, principal and O. B. Bort, faculty manager of athletics, will attend the league meeting as representatives of Xenia Central High School.

DAYTON WRESTLER HERE TUESDAY NIGHT

JACK KOGUT.

Here's Jack Kogut about ready to give an opponent a long, long ride over his shoulder which indicates that Jack has other effective holds than his legdrop when he finds it necessary to use them.

This is known as the flying mare and anyone who is tossed around in this hold two or three times generally wakes up in the dressing room.

Kogut meets Earl Hanson, the Kansas City mauler, at the Opera House Tuesday night, an excellent set of preliminary bouts will get the card under way promptly at 8:30.

LITTLE BUCCANEERS PREPARE FOR OPENING OF SEASON SOON

Xenia Central High's "Little Buccaneers," who have been working out faithfully every day for the last three weeks under the guidance of Assistant Coach Glen H. Patterson are now rounding into fine shape for their first encounter of the 1930 football season.

The season's opener for the combination eighth grade-freshman grid team will probably be with the junior team of the O. S. and S. O. Home within the next week or so.

Pat has a fine looking bunch of eighth and ninth graders who will be the stars of Central High "varsity" eleven within the next few years. He has issued a set of plays to the young football hopefuls and they are expected to give a good account of themselves when the time comes for actual competition.

HUMPTY DUMPTY HAS GOLF TOURNAMENT; PLAYERS QUALIFY

The Humpty Dumpty miniature golf course, which is sponsoring a tournament over its eighteen-hole midge links, will announce Wednesday the list of forty-four players who have turned in scores sufficiently low to qualify them for the finals of the tourney.

Fourteen boys, twelve women and eighteen men won the right to compete in the finals. A number of prizes for the winners have been donated by local merchants and other prizes in the form of season tickets at this course will also be awarded.

Finals in the boys' division will be staged Wednesday night, while the women qualifiers will play Thursday night and the men Saturday night. Players who qualified will not be charged for the rounds they play in the finals.

BOWLING

With Charlie Malavazos, anchor man, bowling a three-game total of 604, the Schmidt Oil Co. quintet won two out of three games from the American Legion in a Recreation League match Monday night. The winners amassed 2,678 pins. Ray Cox topped the Legion bowlers with a 548 series. Box score:

JAMESTOWN VICTOR OVER BROOKVILLE

Aided by errors, the Jamestown Independents registered a 7 to 4 victory over Brookville Sunday afternoon at Leach Park, Jamestown. The hits were evenly divided, each team getting eight, but Brookville misplays let in several Jamestown runs.

The visitors scored first, tallying a run in the opening inning on a single and an error by Haughey. Jamestown scored twice in the third, added two more in the fifth and three in the seventh.

The Schram Jewelers of Wilmington will appear at Jamestown for a game next Sunday. Jamestown was originally scheduled to play the Grismer Coals of Dayton last Sunday but the Dayton team cancelled the game last Thursday and played at Sabina instead.

House Shows Skilful Use Of Modern Material

PROPER FOOD IMPORTANT ADVISES CHILD SPECIALIST

Proper food and cleanliness are a child's outstanding needs, according to Carolyn Conant Van Blarcom, formerly instructor in the John Hopkins Hospital School for Nurses, and author of "Building the Baby" and other books for mothers.

"Most of the illness and death among infants is due to errors in feeding, to infection or to both," she says. "A properly fed baby will resist infection much better than a baby who is not properly fed. Suitable food is the most important factor in the care of babies."

"There are three factors to be observed," asserts Miss Van Blarcom. "The milk must be made up according to a carefully drawn formula. It must be fresh and clean. It must be kept cold. The necessity of keeping milk at a temperature that is constantly and evenly cold cannot be over emphasized."

No matter how good the milk is, when it is delivered to you, if it warms up to a temperature above 50 degrees Fahrenheit for even a short time, the spoiling process begins.

"The baby's milk must be kept cold all the time and the most satisfactory way of doing this is to keep it in a modern electric refrigerator."

"Baby's feeding is too important to be guesswork," states Miss Van Blarcom. "It should be adjusted to the needs of each baby according to its weight, age and general vigor. The doctor should be consulted as to the formula to be used."

"Certified milk should be used so as to be sure that the milk is fresh, whole and not skimmed. It should be free from disease germs, contain no preservatives and should be about the same composition every day. As soon as the milk is received, it should be placed in an electric refrigerator."

The government has issued a number of booklets on the proper preservation of milk. In booklets on the preservation of milk and other foods issued by either the U. S. Department of Agriculture or the health bureau of large cities, the correct temperature at which they should be kept is an important item.

"Bulletin No. 98, issued by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, states that at a temperature below 50 degrees Fahrenheit, bacteria multiply less rapidly, but between 50 degrees and 100 degrees Fahrenheit the increase is very fast; hence the necessity for thorough cooling and the maintenance of low temperatures until used."

"The Public Health Leaflet No. 1, published by the New York City Department of Health, quotes, 'To prevent decomposition of milk, even though sterilized, it must be kept cool at or below 50 degrees Fahrenheit.'"

"Mothers are learning the necessity of keeping baby's milk and the family's food as well, at a constant low temperature to keep it fresh and wholesome. The Government and City Dispensaries have done much to make known the vital importance of correct food, well kept to maintain good health."

IDEAS ON MODERNIZING

No more convincing evidence of the advisability of undertaking a home modernizing program is to be found than that observed in any modern kitchen.

The modern kitchen is probably about half as large as the old-fashioned kitchen. Yet it is more convenient, more attractive and a real joy to the home-maker.

Even families who are fairly observing in taking notice of new building and improvement trends will find many novel ideas among the mass of data with which all lumber dealers are supplied as an aid to them and to their patrons in helping solve one of the most important problems before the home owners of America, that of converting old houses into new homes without great expense.

One of our pathetic figures, is the family living and rearing a family in an out-of-date house because the place is not modern and hence can't be sold, and because it is too good to destroy.

People in this class are among the leaders who are taking keenly to the helpful material being placed at their disposal through the retail lumber dealers.

In modernizing, even more so than in building a new home, it is said, original ideas that are practical and workable are of inestimable value. That's one reason the game of home modernizing is so fascinating. Thought given to the subject will often pay remarkable returns.

Inside the house there is a great variety of changes that might be wrought in every room from the basement to the attic. While exterior changes are dependent in some measure on what is being undertaken within, it is generally advisable to alter the appearance of the outside as well by adding a room at some vital point, by erecting a sun parlor or an open porch, by shingling and by finishing off with some additional attention given to beautifying the outdoor living room, the home grounds.

Any home owner thinking he may be interested in some form of home modernizing is urged to get in touch with the local retail lumberman and secure his suggestions regardless of the amount of work he may have in mind and whether or not he plans to undertake any of the project this year.

House plan in which modern building materials are skilfully used.

GOODBYE SUMMER

ASTRONOMICALLY speaking, summer officially ended Monday and early Tuesday morning marked the advent of autumn. This doesn't mean, however, there will be no more summer-like weather because Tuesday was almost uncomfortably warm.

Tuesday marked the beginning of the autumnal equinox which, according to the science of astronomy, records the seasonal change in weather conditions. The vernal equinox, which occurs in March, ushers in spring.

MEMBERSHIP DRIVE BEING LAUNCHED BY CENTRAL P. T. A.

An intensive campaign is in progress by Central P. T. A. to obtain members for the new school year and to increase the fund in its treasury. Letters have been sent to all parents of Junior High and Senior High pupils urging them to join the P. T. A. for the year 1930-31.

With the funds received from the annual dues of members, the association buys magazines for the library, stocks the medicine cabinets with first aid supplies and is helping to pay off a debt on the school piano. The P. T. A. is also hoping to be able to purchase silver for the dining room and outfit the school band in new uniforms. Officers of the association for the coming year are: president, Mrs. Charles W. Adair; secretary, Mrs. L. S. Hyman and treasurer, Mrs. George Baldwin. The office of vice president was held by the late Miss Mae Harper, but because of her death her successor will be elected at the next meeting of the organization.

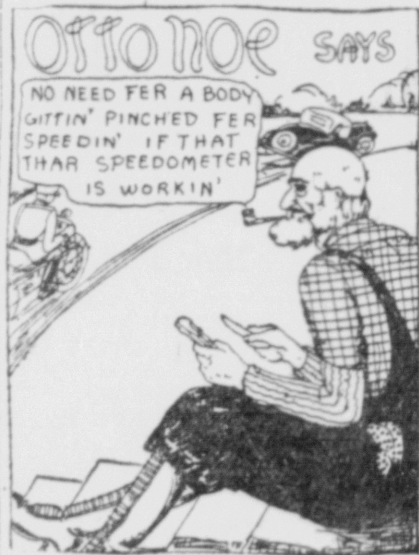

By Architectural Research Bureau, The American Home Magazine. MODERN architecture excels in a skilful use of building materials. American architects are greatly aided in their work by the quality of the manufactured products which are at their disposal.

For instance, modern brick is so much more attractive than the brick of other years, that the two can hardly be compared. Similarly, slates and tiles have become the crowning glory of many modern houses.

The architect of the house shown here, has followed no particular precedent or style in designing his house. The house builds itself up from the plan in a perfectly natural way, and the building materials used in it contribute their quota of beauty.

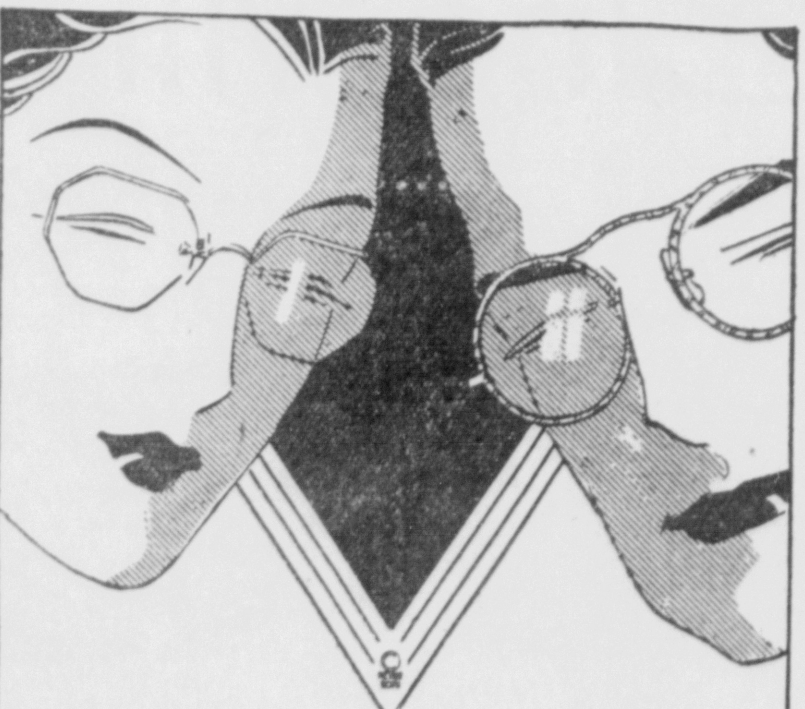

This house is of good size and would probably cost in the neighborhood of $15,000 to build. The floor plans are particularly interesting. The living room is large and well proportioned. The dining room, located in a wing, connects with the kitchen through a breakfast room which serves as a pantry.

SILVERCREEK - JAMMESTOWN MAY ERECT NEW SCHOOL BUILDING

A $115,000 bond issue to purchase a site and finance the contemplated erection of a new fire-proof combination grade and high school building in Silvercreek Twp. was authorized Monday night at a meeting of the combined board of education of Silvercreek Twp. and Jammestown village school districts.

The proposition will be voted upon at the November 4 election. Decision to submit the proposal to the voters was reached after the state department of education announced following a survey of the situation, that the high school charter would be revoked unless improved educational facilities are provided in the district.

The proposed new school building will be sufficiently large to accommodate approximately 500 pupils.

The present school house, located on E. Washington St. in Jammestown, was built after the former building was completely demolished by the destructive cyclone which visited the village April 27, 1884.

The building in recent years has become inadequate. Three years ago it was found necessary to divide the school auditorium and partition it off into two classrooms. Later the auditorium stage was also partitioned off for a class room and the superintendent's office is now used as a recitation room.

The structure is also not fire-proof. The school gymnasium is located at some distance from the school in a building rented by the board of education and a residence situated directly across from the school, rented from Charles Hatch, has been converted into quarters for the manual training and domestic science departments of the school. Outside rental is costing the district $40 a month.

At present the district has an enrollment of 417 pupils, of which a minority is taught in seven one-room schools. The district had eight of these schools but one was discontinued last year.

The combined township and village school board is composed of Roscoe Turner, president; Russell Spahr, vice president; Milton Spahr, clerk; Andrew Bryan and Ernest R. Rockhold.

MUNICIPAL COURT

PLEADS GUILTY, FINED
Pleading guilty to a charge of drunkenness, George Crane, 53, Whiteman St., was fined $10 and costs by Municipal Judge E. Dawson Smith Tuesday morning.

FINED, SENTENCED TO JAIL RESULT OF CARRYING WEAPON

Entering a plea of guilty to a charge of carrying concealed weapons, Lester Rhinisperger, 22, Goes, was fined $100 and costs and sentenced to sixty days in jail by Municipal Judge E. Dawson Smith Tuesday morning.

A tentative charge of resisting an officer, which Police Chief O. H. Cornwell had considered placing against him also, was not pressed.

Chief Cornwell arrested Rhinisperger at the home of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Nellie Hipshire, 27 Locust St., Monday night when a report was received at police headquarters the man was threatening to kill his estranged wife, Doris and her mother.

Rhinisperger was menacing two women with a revolver when the police chief appeared on the scene. Chief Cornwell managed to disarm the enraged man after hand-to-hand encounter in which Rhinisperger, beaten over the head with the officer's mace, came off second best.

Mrs. Rhinisperger recently instituted suit for divorce. Filing of the divorce action is thought to have infuriated her husband, who was only recently discharged from jail after serving out a fine of $25 and costs imposed on a charge of assaulting his wife.

BUSINESS TREND UPWARD SAYS COMMERCE SECRETARY LAMONT

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—Secretary of Commerce Lamont said today that all of his reports indicated that "the business trend is distinctly upward."

"The various weekly reports are more or less mixed," he said, "but there are now some distinctly encouraging features."

Among the encouraging aspects according to Lamont, are the growth of export trade as revealed by August statistics and the distinct picking up in retail business.

August exports gains were greater than usual at this season. Lamont explained that during the years 1922-1929 the increase between July and August averages five and one half per cent, while in 1930 it was more than 12 1-2 per cent. This increase was not confined to one or two commodities but was shared by most of the major groups.

Lamont said cotton exports gained $13,000,000 and those of wheat $6,500,000. There were important increases in exports in gasoline, motor trucks, passenger cars, electrical apparatus, tobacco, flour, crude petroleum, and automobiles. Preliminary figures on retail trade indicated improvements not only in department stores but other retail outlets. Lamont said gains were more than seasonal. Stocks of retail stores were exceptionally low and Lamont expressed the opinion that purchases from manufacturers and wholesalers will increase. The fact that large industries are now buying raw materials was held to indicate that the bottom of the commodity price decline has about been reached.

Lamont declared the government has taken no steps to stimulate raw materials purchasing, adding that the developments are the normal reaction of industries in taking advantage of the price situation.

METHODISTS FAVOR BIRTH CONTROL

MT. VERNON, O., Sept. 23.—An open and frank discussion of birth control is favored today by a majority of the members of the north Ohio conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, who ended their meeting here Monday.

Characterizing birth control as an important issue of the times and declaring that too many children are born under unfavorable conditions, a resolution which was adopted by the conference asserts that "we believe every child should be born under conditions that render possible the heritage of health and happiness."

The conference ended with the announcement of pastorates to which the ministers have been assigned for the coming year.

TROUBLE COMES IN BUNCHES

Unable to pay a fine of $25 and costs imposed Tuesday morning by Municipal Judge E. Dawson Smith on an intoxication charge, Albie Cartwright, 1040 W. Second St., was committed to jail.

Previously his wife, Mabel, had instituted suit for divorce in Common Pleas Court, charging him with habitual drunkenness, cruelty and gross neglect of duty.

The divorce action alleges that for the last three years he has failed to support his wife and two minor children, worked only part of the time and spent his earnings for liquor.

Asserting he would get "beastly" drunk an average of two or three times a month, the wife charges that when intoxicated he sometimes beat her until she gave him her pay and then he would go out and buy liquor with the money. They were married October 23, 1920. The plaintiff asks for reasonable alimony and seeks to be granted custody of the two children, Harold, 9, and Robert, 3.

The profit of a Building Association is the difference between the rate of interest paid for money and the rate received on mortgages. This is fixed, and does not vary with conditions, so that whether times are good or bad, this rate of earning is always uniform. This is why Building Associations can and do pay their dividends with unvarying punctuality, whatever the prevailing conditions.

What is more important is that in over half a century there have been but few instances in Ohio where the depositor has lost even a small fraction of his deposit. It is to the high credit of the Ohio associations that not a dollar has been lost to their depositors in the past year, even under the most unfavorable business conditions. This Association has its full share in this splendid record of the last half century.

First mortgages as a class are the most dependable of all forms of security, and when they fail, little else will survive. Their dependence has not failed in all of the vicissitudes of the past fifty years, and present conditions do not even approach a serious test of the responsibility of the associations.

SPLASH

CHAPTER 52

"I know who kidnapped me!" Kitty announced the fact to Mr. Goss the next morning as soon as she entered the room. Long experience had taught her it was a waste of time to say "Good morning." If she had anything to say she had to say it before he began to bark dictation.

He turned shaggy browns and fierce eyes on her.

"His name is Morton De Witt. He was pointed out to me last night in a restaurant."

Mr. Goss said nothing for a minute. Then he stepped to the door and called into the next room. Gordon Platt followed him back. He bowed gravely to Kitty, and Kitty, her face flaming, bowed as gravely to him.

"Miss Willmot has identified one of her kidnappers!" began Mr. Goss. "Morton De Witt. I thought it was that bunch! Shall we have him arrested now or wait for Gayle?"

Gordon Platt did not look at Kitty, and Kitty tried her best to keep her eyes off of him. Breathlessly she waited for his voice. Mr. Goss didn't know the torment it was to be in the same room and in conference with him. Fiercely she strove to keep from showing her heart on her sleeve.

"Does Miss Willmot want to send him to jail for kidnapping?" inquired Gordon, quietly.

"Don't be a fool! There she is—ask her!"

"Do you, Miss Willmot?" asked Gordon, turning grave eyes on her. They were rather sick eyes, Kitty saw with concern; tormented eyes, as if their owner were far from happy. He looked pale and wan as if he had not slept.

"I—why, I don't know. I don't think such an outrage should be unpunished—but it was all part of a game. It was planned by Mr. Goss—the first kidnapping—the final kidnapping, I mean," stammered Kitty.

"It will mean going to court, facing him, after swearing out a warrant. Has he any idea that you know him?"

"No, Oh no!" cried Kitty. "He didn't know I saw him through the transom or the window as I went down the rope. He didn't see me last night, I know. I had my escort take me out immediately. He thought I was ill—he had to make some excuse—" Her voice trailed off.

Both men sat silent. The air was electric with the passage of thought between the spurned girl with the love dammed in her heart and the man who had hurt her. But of this Mr. Goss knew nothing—at least Kitty hoped not. Surely Gordon would have told him.

"You ran her into great danger!" Gordon spoke rather sharply to Goss and Kitty's heart leaped. It was sweet to hear him in her defense! "You used a weak girl in a man's job. It was done without my knowledge or consent. I still consider it entirely unwarranted, even though I myself got Miss Willmot to agree to help in the first place."

Of course he considered it unwarranted. He must have guessed by now that her kidnappers had shown her that scene at Edith's, in which Gordon had played so poor a part! Kitty's eyes flashed at the memory.

"Oh, forget it! Past history, water over the dam! The thing to do now is to consider what is best for the office."

Mr. Goss thought only of the office, of money, of success! Kitty's lip curled. Well, it was almost over. When she had identified the others and they stood in the prisoners' dock together, she could leave, get a new job, tear herself entirely away from Goss and Gordon Platt and the prospects of meeting him as a stranger.

"If Miss Willmot wishes he should be arrested at once!" continued Gordon. "You owe her that. I don't know how she feels about it."

"Speak up, can't you?" demanded Goss, with his customary rudeness.

"I have no desire for publicity," began Kitty. "The whole thing was a game. I deliberately submitted to a kidnapping, the second time. As I understand it, what you want to do is trace the connection between those who kidnapped me and those who might be the source of the leak of information from this office. Will having Morton De Witt sent to jail tell you that?"

Gordon looked at Goss and Goss looked at Gordon. Then both turned to her and there was a new respect in the dwarf's eyes.

"My God, the woman has sense!" he cried. "Who would think of finding it in a secretary?"

Kitty laughed aloud; it was funny—Mr. Goss, paying her a fancy salary as a stenographer, trusting her with the most important mission, thrusting her bodily into an affair, which might easily have been terrible in its results—and now surprised that she had any sense.

"Shut up!" cried Goss. "It's no laughing matter. The girl is right!" to Gordon. "We'll just turn this information over to Gayle, too—say nothing to any one!" he commanded Kitty. "Your revenge can wait!"

"I don't want any revenge!" answered Kitty. "All I want is to get through with it and leave!"

She saw Gordon's start of surprise and tossed her head. Probably he had not known she was going to leave! She would see that he understood it now.

"I hope you will move quickly!" she said to Mr. Goss. "I promised to stay while I could be of use in identifying these men, but I am anxious to leave here for good. I have a much better position, under much happier auspices, waiting for me."

She arose, bowed gravely to both men and left the office, her head in the air, her hands tightly clenched to keep them from trembling. But she did not go to her desk. She walked quickly to the rest room, hoping, praying, it should be empty.

There she sank down in a chair and shook as if with a chill; meeting Gordon Platt had been more than her nerves were ready to stand.

It all came over her afresh; how dear he had been, how sweet his kisses, how lovely his companionship. She traveled again the Boston Post Road in his car; she sat again opposite him at little dinners. Once more they danced together in a far away Brooklyn night club, that no one knew of their association—her lip curled. How much of that secrecy had been to avoid recognition of an alliance by those who might be concerned in the leak, and how much to keep news of their being together from Edith?

She sat for half an hour, calming herself, wishing she were home, wishing she had never seen Goss, wishing with all her heart that she could tear the memory of Gordon from her heart as she had torn his image from its pedestal of all that was manly and honorable in her mind.

Then the slow tears welled and Kitty had to fight anew not to break down.

"Oh, I won't pity myself," she cried low. "I won't, I won't! I am not sorry—I am glad, glad, glad I found out in time! I will be a sport—I will be brave—I will!"

She dashed the tears from her eyes, washed her face and went back. But her hand went to her heart as she did so. Gordon Platt was waiting patiently by her desk.

He spoke quietly, but not secretly. Edith, near by at her files, could have heard every word if she wished, evidently.

"May I ask, Miss Willmot, where is this new position you are to take?" he said, smoothly. "Mr. Goss wants me to offer you equal inducements to remain here."

Kitty looked him straight in the face. It was her chance and she took it. Gone tears, gone trembling, gone heart ache; only pride remained. Not for gold or precious stones would she have this man know what a terrible hurt he had done her, how her heart ached for him, how she loved the very ground he stood on, even while she detested the man who stood upon it.

"No man living can offer me equal inducements!" she stated simply.

"Why not?"

"Because it is not a paid job!" answered Kitty. "I am going to be married!"

The Theater

Fox executives are wrinkling their brows over the problem of whether Sergeant Quirt or Captain Flagg shall be led off in "Women of All Nations," the new adventure of a two-fisted heart-smasher.

The death of one of the pair obviously would give dramatic punch to the picture, yet expediency may dictate that they be left alive for more conquests, boxoffice as well as feminine.

It is learned now that Sergeant Quirt, who is really none other in our old friend Edmund Lowe, rowly escaped death in "The Chick-My World." The script called for his attack of fever to be fatal, but after seeing the rushes

The first executive turned it down, but summoned another to read it. The second found it wanting, but summoned a third, who also frowned upon it. Karnes was reaching for his hat when the first said it was worthless, and asked how much Karnes wanted for it. He was about to say $200, having made a mental reduction during the interim, when the executive offered $5,000.

Medbury has yet to make the name for himself as a "rag" man as already attained by Wilson Mizner, who is the king of all the wisecrackers and has probably sold more smart sayings to comedians than any living man, not excluding Gene Buck. Mizner owns the famous Brown Derby restaurants in Hollywood and his wisecracking is a spontaneous sideline.

By the same token one might argue that the two will survive the present consultation over their e. Well-established characters e Flagg (Victor McLaglen) and urt are rare in screen history. would be a shame to miss their nual joust in the lists of love.

CAPONE INSTALLS SELF AS CZAR OF CHICAGO GANGS TO END WAR

FRANK McERLANE

AL (Scarface) CAPONE

"SPIKE" O'DONNELL

CHICAGO, Sept. 23.—For the first time in Volsteadian history gangland has a governmental cabinet!

This has been authenticated from the most reliable sources. Al Capone is prime minister and dictator.

His cabinet officers are men who are gang bosses in their own right. Each has risen to supremacy in his own feudal territory by the might of machine gun and death. Each remains a power today, yet under the iron sway and deadly dominance of the sinister "Scarface"—Capone.

Here is the strange gangland cabinet of the strangest government in the world:

Ted Newberry, director of North Side booze, gambling and vice activities.

"Klondyke" O'Donnell, director of West Side activities.

Frank McErlane, director of South Side activities.

Danny Stanton, director of Southeast Side activities.

Joe Salts, director of Southwest Side activities.

"Spike" O'Donnell, co-operative director of the general South Side activities.

These "ministers" control not only booze, gambling and vice in Chicago, but life and death. Their edicts, appealable only to Dictator Capone, are obeyed as are the decrees of any foreign minister.

These men set the price of liquor, superintend its distribution, and carry out their master's bidding—in almost unbelievable contrast to conditions a few years back.

In addition to these cabinet officers, there are others—"undersecretaries"—nearly as important.

They are Hymie Levin, a fast growing gangland figure; George ("Red") Barker, labor racketeer; Jack Gusick, big beer man; and Harry Gusick, of the same family, and same business. In many ways they are more powerful than some of Capone's cabinet members.

Formation of the gangland cabinet developed because Capone heart is not entirely murderous.

More than once he has called truces to halt the deadly wars.

Capone, as time rolled on, saw the fallacy of gangsters exterminating one another. What good were booze profits, he asked, to dead men? But rival gang leaders could not see it his way. They wanted war, and Capone gave it to them, more than they could stand.

Recently Capone called a parley of rival gang chiefs. A few weeks later Capone had consolidated, and unified the half dozen or more major gangs with the exception of one, that of George ("Bugs") Moran, North Side leader. Capone assigned his friend Newberry to that territory. He began negotiating with Dominick and Joe Aiello, partners of Moran, and latest reports indicate that he will swing the Aiello support and organization to his side.

The other gang leaders were left in their own districts, all with the agreement to handle Capone beer. Salts was treated less cordially. He was listed merely as a figurehead, although he will share in the profits. Alleged enemies of Salts in the past have been found tortured to death.

All the leaders agreed to contribute to a central war-chest, share necessary expenses, such as lawyers' fees and "pensions." (Under the Capone system, any follower jailed receives double pay, his salary going to his family.)

Some of the South Side chiefs drew stipulations in their agreement with Capone. One, "Spike" O'Donnell, no relative of "Klondyke's," consented to go along his old ways, handle Capone beer when and where he could and supply his own beer where Capone couldn't. None of the bosses will handle his territory personally, according to another clause in the pact. There is too much "heat," too much publicity for the prominent gangsters to risk personal supervision. They will superintend by proxy by unknowns.

Under the agreement, the gangland government is supreme with the exception of that section bossed by Moran, and he is at present a minus figure. Capone, governing from his vantage place in Cicero, receives daily reports, gives daily orders. So far, all is cooperation for the one-time rival leaders realize the wisdom of Capone. They realize that rich profits mean nothing to dead men, and they agree with Capone that "murder doesn't pay."

And so Chicago's commercialized booze, gambling and vice are under the absolute control of a gangland cabinet, headed by a man who has decided that gang murders must stop.

WILBERFORCE WILL HAVE 800 STUDENTS

With more than 600 already registered and with the theological seminary opening in October, it is estimated that more than 800 students will be enrolled at Wilberforce University for the fall quarter.

FARM WOMAN BENEFITED

After Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Lickdale, Pa.—"Before I was married, my mother and sister and I did all the farming work on a 64-acre farm for eleven years. I married a farmer and now in addition to my housework and the care of my children I help him with the outside work on our farm. After my last child was born, I began to suffer as many women do. Finally our family doctor told me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did and now I am a new woman and I know that good health is better than riches."—Mrs. CLYDE L. WILSON GIVEN FINE ON DRIVING CHARGE BUT FACES ANOTHER

On a charge of reckless driving, to which he pleaded guilty, James H. Wilson, 36, colored, reputed bootlegger, was fined $100 and costs and sentenced to five days in jail by Probate Judge S. C. Wright Monday afternoon.

Wilson was then taken to Municipal Court, where he was arraigned on a charge of transporting liquor, pleaded not guilty and was bound over to the grand jury under bond fixed at $1,000 by Judge E. Dawson Smith. The transporting charge will be regarded as a third offense of liquor law violation, authorities say.

Wilson, it is claimed, attempted to escape from L. A. Davis, county road patrolman, when the officer, who was patrolling the Cincinnati Pike, tried to halt his car near Mt. Holly Saturday night. Instead of stopping, Wilson is alleged to have speeded up his machine and traveled through Spring Valley at better than sixty miles an hour with Davis chasing him. He temporarily escaped arrest but later in the evening was captured by the road patrolman and another officer east of Xenia.
